Survey Methodology

- In October and November 2019 GG+A SurveyLab conducted a survey on behalf of University of Denver (DU).
- The primary goal of the survey was to gather data about the DU alumni community in service of a strategic plan for alumni engagement. The survey investigates alumni attitudes towards DU, preferences for engagement and communications, compelling messaging, donor motivations, and propensity for philanthropy.
- The online survey was sent to 106,124 DU alumni who were individuals with valid email addresses. At the time of analysis, 5,132 respondents participated in the survey, yielding a response rate of 5%. None of the questions required a response, so the number of respondents for any given question will vary.
- The large number of respondents results in a low margin of error, and thus a high ability to extrapolate the results to the full alumni population. The overall margin of error is approximately +/- 1%. Margins of error are shown on each bar graph. In cross-tabulations, green or red chevrons demonstrate the degree and direction of statistical significance at a 95% confidence level.
- Many questions asked for a response on a scale of 1 (lowest) to 10 (highest). For easier viewing and analysis, these were categorized into 3 groups:
 - High (8-10)
 - Medium (5-7)
 - Low (1-4)

Alumni Respondent Characteristics – Graduation Class

Alumni in class years 2010 or later are slightly over-represented in the survey, making up 39% of the survey distribution, and just 29% in the overall population on file.

Alumni Respondent Characteristics – Academic Area

The six most common schools in the survey sample are used for analysis. Alumni from other schools are grouped together in the "Other" category.

Affiliation with DU

Respondents most commonly express affiliation with a specific academic area (67%) and with DU as a whole (55%). Smaller numbers feel affiliated with athletics (16%), particular faculty members (14%), and Greek (10%) or alumni organizations (10%). Response options are not mutually exclusive.

Strongest area of affiliation

Asked which area of DU they most identify with, over half of respondents (51%) most strongly identify with a specific academic area (college, major, or department). Just 27% of respondents most identify with DU as a whole.

Strongest area of affiliation – Graduate Alumni

Strongest area of affiliation – Undergraduate Alumni

Strongest area of affiliation – Multiple Degreed

Attitudes Towards DU

Attitudes towards DU

Respondents overall feel positively about DU (55%), loyal (43%), and are likely to recommend DU to prospective students (50%). These numbers are positive, but lower than we typically observe at other higher education institutions, which generally average around 73% for metrics like positivity. However, donors express stronger feelings of positivity and loyalty.

Feelings of connection are much lower among respondents (17%), especially non-donors, of whom only about 11% feel very connected. GG+A research across higher education shows that connectedness is a key factor in determining likelihood to give, and to give at higher levels. This correlation with giving holds true as 60% of $10k+ donors report feeling very connected. Connection at DU is slightly lower than at other universities, which typically range between 25%-35%.

Small numbers of respondents express confidence in DU leadership (19%), and notably, responses rise to just 42% among $10k+ donors.

Alumni who graduated before 2000, Business, and Arts and Humanities alumni express slightly stronger feelings of positivity (64%+) and connection (17%+). Alumni in class years 2010+ feel less positive (45%), less loyal (33%), and express less confidence in DU leadership (13%) than alumni in other class years. Typically, feelings of connection are stronger among young alumni, but just 15% of 2010+ alumni answer that they feel very connected to DU.

The path of DU

Forty-four percent of alumni (44%) say that DU's reputation is somewhat or significantly improving, and 67% feel it is at least staying the same. Twenty-one percent (21%) of respondents answer "I don't know" - which is an indicator of a lack of connectedness. Individuals who feel the school is on a positive trajectory are more likely to be major donors – 68% of $10,000+ donors answer that DU's reputation is somewhat or significantly improving.

Detailed in the appendix, alumni graduating before 2000 (19%+), Arts and Humanities (25%), and Law alumni (22%) express with slightly higher percentages that DU's reputation is significantly improving. 2010+ alumni most commonly answer that DU's reputation is staying the same (31%).

Important to connection with DU

Alumni answer that reading University of Denver Magazine (46%) and wearing DU apparel (30%) are important to their feeling of connection to DU. A quarter of alumni answer that communicating with faculty or staff, the DU alumni e-newsletter, DU athletic games, visiting the campus informally, and attending a DU event on campus help to build connection with the University.

Detailed in the appendix, 2010+ alumni answer that communicating with faculty or staff (37%), wearing DU apparel (37%), and networking or professional development (31%) are most important to connection. The University of Denver Magazine is a much less important point of connection to young alumni (17%). Alumni in class years before 1980 answer that University of Denver Magazine (58%) and the DU alumni e-newsletter (38%) are their strongest points of connection.

GG+A

Interest in volunteer opportunities

Overwhelmingly, alumni express interest in volunteering through mentoring students or young alumni (45%). Slightly smaller numbers of alumni are interested in using their professional skills or talents to assist DU (31%), interviewing or recruiting prospective students (28%), and hiring students for internships or jobs at their company (27%).
